For many students who go to college, music is something sacrificed for their studies. But at Juniata, you don’t have to give up music just because you want to be a chemist, ecologist, historian, teacher or accountant, like Allison. Indulge your love of music and travel to different places with people who are also moved by music—but concentrate academically on other plans for your professional life.

Our Recent Student Accomplishments

Benson Canfield ’12, Grace Canfield ’10, Colleen Chiochetti ’13, Nora Davidson ’12, Nate Frieswyk ’12 and Andrew Orsie ’12 attended the Pennsylvania Collegiate Choral Association Honors Festival at Clarion University in January 2010. Emmy-nominated conductor Paul Salomunovich conducted the 110-voice choir through three days of rehearsal and performing.

Trumpeter Katie Downey ’13, clarinetist Kelsey Walakovits ’11, and flutists Claire Wayman ’13 and Katelyn Hilands ’14 performed in the 64th Annual Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Band, held in March 2011 on Juniata’s campus. Wayman also performed with the National Small College Intercollegiate Band in Seattle, Wash., in March 2011.

Aggie Kwon ’09, Erin Burt ’12 and James Rixey ’12 were invited to play in the Altoona Symphony Orchestra string section in 2008-2009, and, in 2009-2010, the entire Orchestra performed Holst’s “The Planets” with the Altoona Symphony in a pair of side-by-side concerts.

Our Recent Graduates in the Graduate School

Erik Dulick ’11 is currently enrolled at the Berklee College of Music, following his May 2011 graduation from Juniata.

Our Recent Graduates in the Workforce

Virginia Meadows ’03 and David Meadows ’98, former Juniata choir members, recorded and released a CD entitled More than Meets the Eye for the July 2010 Church of the Brethren National Youth Conference.

What Our Alumni Are Saying

“I always look forward to playing my clarinet. Being in the Juniata Wind Symphony is like escaping to a different world.”

-Allison DiVito ’13

Go Interdisciplinary

Broaden your liberal arts education through the creative expression of music. As performers and listeners, our students develop their abilities to perceive the subtleties of musical expression and approach music as a reflection of the cultures in which it is found.
